In the United States, on December 18, 2015 the omnibus bill repealed the May 23, 2013 and January 2009 rules on COOL requirements for muscle cuts of beef and pork. Cargill has removed the previously required “born, Raised and Harvested” statements from all applicable labels, unless otherwise agreed upon with customers.

Cargill will continue to strive for excellence in providing our customers with high-quality product manufactured under strict food safety standards.
